Dedication. The School of Medicine's Clinical Sciences Research Building (CSRB), the largest construction project ever undertaken by WU, was dedicated Oct. 17 during an outdoor ceremony. The 10-story, $55 million structure at 4939 Audubon took three years to complete. The building, which is devoted solely to clinical research, will house offices and laboratories for six departments of the medical school. U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., and U.S. Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., spoke during the ceremony. Also participating in the dedication were: Samuel B. Guze, vice chancellor for medical affairs at WU; Gyo Obata, architect with Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum Inc., designers of the building; William H. Danforth, chancellor of WU; W. L. Hadley Griffin, chairman of the WU Board of Trustees; M. Kenton King, dean of the School of Medicine; and David M. Kipnis, Adolphus Busch Professor and chairman of the Department of Medicine.

Eliot Society dedicates George Kassabaum bust

The William Greenleaf Eliot Society will present WU's School of Architecture with the George E. Kassabaum Memorial Sculpture at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 30, in the main entrance of Givens Hall, facing Forsyth Boulevard.

A bronze bust in memory of Kassabaum (1920-1982), WU alumnus, one of the three founders of the international architectural firm of Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum (HOK), and former president of the Eliot Society, will be installed on a wall-based pedestal in the foyer of Givens Hall. The Society commissioned H. Richard Duhme Jr., WU professor emeritus of art, to create the bust.

A member of WU's architecture faculty from 1947 to 1951, Kassabaum served on the University's Board of Trustees from 1979 to 1982. He was president of the Eliot Society from 1978 to 1982. A Fellow of the American Institute of Architects (AIA), Kassabaum was elected the organization's national president in 1968.

"George Kassabaum's life as an alumnus, a young member of the faculty, and eventually, a member of the Board of Trustees, was very

Two economists open 10th Olin Conference

Juanita Kreps, secretary of commerce under President Jimmy Carter, and Murray L. Weidenbaum, past chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors under President Ronald Reagan, will discuss the federal deficit and directions for the post-election economy at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 30, in WU's Bixby Gallery in Bixby Hall.

The two economists will open the 10th annual Mr. and Mrs. Spencer T. Olin Conference, titled "From Access to Ascent: The New Challenge for Professional Women," sponsored by the Monticello College Foundation and WU. The conference is free and open to the public.

Kreps also will deliver the Assembly Series lecture at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 31, in Graham Chapel. Her topic is the title of the conference. She spoke at the first annual Olin Conference.

A panel of alumnae Olin Fellows will discuss "Women and Professional Commitments" from 2 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 31, in Bixby Gallery. Moderated by Nancy Pope, lecturer in the University's English department, the panel includes: Norella Huggins, an attorney with Armstrong, Teasdale, Kramer and Vaughan, St. Louis; Roanne Karzon, assistant professor of audiology, WU School of Medicine; Michelle Kemp, M.D., assistant in pediatrics, Children's Hospital of St. Louis; and Victoria Weisz, visiting assistant professor in the department of psychology, University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana.

The conference also will include the 10th anniversary exhibition of art and architecture by alumnae Olin Fellows, Oct. 29 to 31, in Bixby Gallery.

Kreps served as secretary of commerce from January 1977 to December 1979. She was named James B. Duke Professor of Economics at Duke University in 1972 (now emerita) and vice president of the university in 1973.

Since leaving the Department of Commerce, she has served on such boards as the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Chrysler Corp. She is a trustee of the Duke Endowment.

Weidenbaum was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors from January 1981 to July 1982. He resigned his post and returned to WU to resume full-time teaching and research responsibilities as Mallinckrodt Distinguished University Professor and director of the Center for the Study of American Business.

The Monticello College Foundation transferred $1 million in assets to WU's endowment in February 1984 for the permanent funding of a portion of the Spencer T. and Ann W. Olin Fellowship Program for Women, which includes the annual conference. Designed to encourage young women of exceptional promise to seek careers in higher education and the professions, the program has been a major activity of the foundation for the past 10 years.

Twenty-five Olin Fellows currently are pursuing advanced degrees in WU post-graduate programs.

The foundation, headquartered on the campus of Lewis and Clark Community College in Godfrey, Ill., was established in 1971 after Monticello College closed and the campus was converted into the community college. Founded by retired sea captain Benjamin Godfrey, Monticello College educated young women for more than 130 years.

Bauhaus dancers explore spatial design through the use of basic prop forms.

Bauhaus dance-theatre introduced to Edison

Traditional Indonesian music and Bauhaus dance-theatre will open the November events at WU's Edison Theatre.

At 8 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 2, the theatre will resonate with the exotic sounds of the University of Northern Illinois Balinese Gamelan, under the direction of Kuo-Huang Han, the university's world music director. Han will explain the origin and properties of the gamelan, a percussion-dominated gong-chime ensemble native to Java, Sunda and Bali.

Titled "Music from Paradise," the program will feature Sundanese bamboo angklung (bamboo rattles) and Balinese marching music.

According to Han, the instruments are regarded by the Indonesians as having spirit and sex differences. Principles of Balinese gamelan music include ostinato (musical figure repeated at the same pitch throughout a work), stratification, melodic and rhythmic variations, and interlocking patterns.

After the concert, the audience will be invited to play the instruments.

On Nov. 3, Oscar Schlemmer's Bauhaus Dances — an art form expressed in architecture and dance — will lend new definition to the Edison stage. Dancing in the Kitchen, a New York-based performance group, will present the works.

Originally performed from 1926 through 1929, Schlemmer's dances have been termed "militaristic," "metaphysical," "architectonic" and "academic" by contemporary critics.

An accomplished painter, Schlemmer (1888-1943) was a member of the faculty at the Bauhaus Institute, which was devoted to the unification of arts, crafts and technology for the creation of a new, total order of architecture. After World War I, he pursued dance and theatre projects while continuing to exhibit his paintings throughout Germany.

By padding and masking the performers in his productions, Schlemmer reiterated the Bauhaus themes of unification, abstraction and standardization of form. The dances, to be presented at 8 p.m., were reconstructed by New York-based dancer Debra McCall, with former Bauhaus student and Schlemmer performer Andreas Weininger.

General admission to the Balinese gamelan concert is $5; $4 for WU faculty and staff, and area students; and $3 for WU students. Tickets will be sold from the box office at the time of the performance. Admission to the Bauhaus Dances is $8; $5 for WU faculty and staff, and area students; and $4 for WU students. Tickets are on sale now. For more information, call the box office at 889-6543.

Former medical school professor returns to deliver Massie lecture

A former professor and co-chairman of the Department of Medicine at the School of Medicine will return to the medical school Tuesday, Oct. 30, to deliver the second annual Edward Massie Lecture in Cardiovascular Disease.

Sol Sherry, M.D., dean and distinguished professor of medicine at Temple University School of Medicine in New York City, will discuss "Washington University and the Development of Thrombolytic Therapy." His talk will begin at 4 p.m. in the Carl V. Moore Auditorium, 660 S. Euclid Ave. The lecture is sponsored by the Division of Cardiology to honor Edward Massie, M.D., professor emeritus of clinical medicine at WU.

Thrombolytic therapy is relatively new, and involves using special agents to dissolve blood clots. WU researchers this summer published results of a pilot study using an experimental chemical called t-PA, tissue plasminogen activator. In six out of seven patients, t-PA quickly and safely stopped a heart attack in progress by dissolving the blood clot blocking a coronary artery. The new therapy could ultimately save thousands of lives each year.

Sherry is considered a pioneer in understanding the thrombolytic system and its use in patients. He was responsible for the first extensive purification of tissue plasminogen activator. As early as 1950, Sherry studied streptokinase, an enzyme extracted from streptococcus bacteria that is now the most widely used clot-dissolving agent. He was instrumental in proving that streptokinase can be effective in opening blocked blood vessels in humans.

Sherry was a faculty member at the School of Medicine from 1954 until 1967, when he became chairman and professor of the Department of Internal Medicine at Temple University. He also has served as director and director emeritus of the Specialized Center for Thrombosis Research at Temple University. Earlier in his career, Sherry served on the faculty at New York University School of Medicine and at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine.

He is currently physician-in-chief at Temple University Hospital and consultant in medicine at German-town Hospital. While in St. Louis, he was on staff at Jewish Hospital, where he was director of the Division of Medical Services, and at Barnes Hospital.

Minority businessmen meet students

The Business Minority Council (BMC), a group of WU minority business students, is sponsoring its 2nd annual reception for the St. Louis area minority business community.

The reception, which is being held from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 25, in the Alumni House, is an event of the University's Black Arts and Sciences Festival Oct. 22-26.

The reception's guest list includes approximately 250 individuals from a broad cross-section of the metropolitan St. Louis minority business community.

Minority corporate executives from Anheuser-Busch, Monsanto, Wang Laboratories, Seven-Up, McDonnell-Douglass, Ralston Purina, and Pet Inc. will attend. Building contractors, accountants, attorneys, financial services administrators, insurance agents, and various suppliers and distributors also will be represented.

The reception will provide an opportunity for WU business students to meet members of the minority business community.

Unpublished manuscripts sought

Brown University Press is seeking manuscripts in all major fields and disciplines for entrance in the First Book Prize Awards. Established in 1981, the awards are given to scholars who have not previously published book-length works.

The prize is publication by the Brown University Press through its affiliation with the University Press of New England. Recently completed doctoral dissertations will be considered only if they have been revised for publication in book form.

Brown University Press established the prize to secure recognition for exceptionally able younger scholars, so that they will remain in the academic profession, pursuing their intended careers.

Guidelines for submitting a manuscript are:

1. The manuscript must be of exceptional quality and submitted in its final form.

2. The manuscript must not be under consideration elsewhere while it is at the Brown University Press.

3. A single copy of the manuscript (not the ribbon copy), the author's curriculum vitae, and a cover letter stating that the manuscript is being submitted as a candidate for the prize should be sent to: Brown University Press, Box 1881, Providence, R.I., 02912.

much interwoven with WU, an institution to which he gave much of himself," said Constantine E. Michaelides, dean of WU's School of Architecture.

Duhme, a WU alumnus, taught sculpture at WU from 1947 to 1982.

Tuesday's dedication ceremony will include brief addresses from:

Chancellor William H. Danforth; W. L. Hadley Griffin, chairman of WU's Board of Trustees; William M. Van Cleve, president of the Eliot Society and member of the Board of Trustees; Michaelides; Gregory S. Palermo, president of the St. Louis chapter of the AIA; and H. King Graf, a vice chairman of HOK.

NOTABLES

Gerald Abbott from Fairfax Station, Va., and Edy Ferguson from South Holland, Ill., two freshmen in the School of Fine Arts, have received $6,000 Fred Conway Art Scholarships. More than 75 scholarships or awards were presented in late September at the annual School of Fine Arts Awards Assembly in Steinberg Auditorium.

James Alt, professor in the political science department, chaired a meeting of the British Politics Group at the 80th annual meeting of the American Political Science Association held Aug. 30-Sept. 2 in Washington, D.C. He also presented a paper, titled "Are Reaganomics Thatcheronomics?" Other members from the political science department attending the meeting were: Barry Ames, associate professor, who presented a paper titled "What Difference Does a Congress Make? Political Structure, Social-Economic Roots and the Distribution of Public Expenditures in Brazil's Competitive Period"; Lucius Barker, Gellhorn Professor of Public Affairs and professor of political science, who participated in a roundtable and discussed "The Debt of American Politics to Jesse Jackson"; Randall Calvert, assistant professor, who collaborated with Barry Weingast, associate professor in the economics department on a paper titled "Measuring Congressional Influence: A New Approach to Congress and Regulation." Calvert also chaired a panel on Models of the Legislative Process; William Caspary, associate professor, presented a paper on "A New Self in the Making: Self-Unification and Ethical Choice"; Arnold Heidenheimer, professor, was a discussant on a panel on Scholarship and Policy: Advice, Influence and the Resolution of Conflict; H.W. Perry Jr., instructor, was a discussant on a panel on Supreme Court Behaviors: New Research on Old Questions; Robert H. Salisbury, Souers Professor of American Government, co-authored a paper, "Soaking and Poking Among the Movers and Shakers: Quantitative Ethnography in the K Street Corridors." He and Gregory Weiher, WU graduate student now teaching at the University of Houston, presented a paper on "When Does Religion Make a Difference? Interactions Among Context, Attendance and Beliefs"; and George Shulman, assistant professor, presented a paper on "The Politics of Home and Community: Deadend or a Way Out?"

Harold J. Brandon, visiting professor of mechanical engineering, was the recipient of the 1984 Best Paper Award from the Society of Soft Drink Technologists. The award, presented at the annual meeting in Phoenix, was in recognition of the greatest contribution to the soft drink industry for 1984. It was based on Brandon's publication titled "Experimental Investigation of the SSDT Standard Soiled Bottle for Research"

Donald Cox, assistant professor of economics, received a National Fellowship at the Hoover Institute at Stanford University and is on leave of absence from WU during the 1984-85 academic year.

Charles L. Leven, director of WU's Institute for Urban and Regional Studies and professor of economics, served as the U.S. national correspondent when he attended the steering group meeting of the Regional Policy and Urban Decline Study of the European Economic Council (EEC) held recently in Brussels, Belgium. Leven also presented a paper, titled "Economic Benefits of Cardiac Rehabilitation," at the Health Economists' Research Group at the Department of Community Medicine, University of Aberdeen, Scotland.

Paul Michael Lutzeler, professor and chairman of the German department, participated in the annual conference of the interdisciplinary German Studies Association of America held Oct. 11-14 in Denver, Colo. Lutzeler spoke on "19th-century Cosmopolitanism" during the conference's Romanticism Section, and he chaired the 20th Century Section.

Peter E. Marcus, professor of art, and Joan M. Hall, part-time lecturer in art, are among 20 winners of the 1984 Mid-America Arts Alliance and National Endowment for the Arts Visual Arts Fellowships. Marcus won for intaglio prints, Hall, for linocuts on handmade paper. The winners were selected from 243 applicants in the mid-America region. Now in its second year, the program honors artists working in printmaking, drawing and one-of-a-kind artists' books.

Mohamed Marzouk, professor of operative dentistry in the School of Dental Medicine, recently was appointed to a three-year term as a member of the test construction committee for the Operative Dentistry-Dental Materials portion of the National Board examination. The appointment was made by the Joint Commission of the National Dental Examiners.

Silvia Pedraza-Bailey, assistant professor of sociology, presented a paper on "Disaffection and the Revolution: Cuba's Last Wave of Exiles" at the meeting of the Institute of Cuban Studies held recently at Florida International University. She also organized and chaired a session on "Hispanic Immigration to the United States" for the annual meeting of the Society for the Study of Social Problems in San Antonio, Texas. Her book Political and Economic Migrants in America: Cubans and Mexicans will be published by the University of Texas Press.

Have you done something noteworthy?

Have you: Presented a paper? Won an award? Been named to a committee or elected an officer of a professional organization? The Washington University Record will help spread the good news. Contributions regarding faculty and staff scholarly or professional activities are gladly accepted and encouraged. The WU Battling Bears (dark jerseys) tackled the Rhodes College Lynxcat Sept. 29 during the Homecoming game.

Football Bears could finish 1984 with first winning season since '78

Two consecutive losses to NCAA Division III powers have dropped the WU football record to 2-4, with three games remaining to play in 1984. Despite the below .500 mark, WU head coach Fred Remmy feels his squad is improved from a year ago and is capable of winning their final three contests to finish 1984 with their first winning season since 1978.

"The coaching staff and I have been pleased with our progress," said Remmy. "We're 2-4, but could easily be 4-2 and maybe even 5-1 with a break, here or there."

"Our athletes have progressed rapidly each week which is causing the opponents to worry about Washington University a little more than they used to. I hope the trend continues."

Several facts and figures support Remmy's statements that the Bears are better than their 2-4 record would indicate. "After six games, we have scored 95 points compared to last year's entire total of 70," Remmy said. "The scoring output is also higher than the 1982 total and should rival the 1981 figure of 147."

Individually for WU, junior quarterback Steve Sides has been impressive in handling the Bear offensive attack. "Steve has been a big key to our success thus far this season," said Remmy. "He has matured greatly and is a good Division III quarterback. His statistics show that he belongs with the best. His NCAA passing efficiency rating is within a point of the top twelve quarterbacks in Division III."

For the Bears, Sides has passed for 8 touchdowns, has a pass completion percentage of .509, and has thrown for 750 yards.

Joining Sides on the offense has been freshman tailback, Tom Polacek. Against Rhodes College on Sept. 29, all Polacek did was rush for 143 yards including one touchdown carry for 32 yards. Since that game, Polacek has rushed for more than 100 yards two additional times and remains the WU leading rusher with 408 yards for 5.8 yards per carry average.

Two home games remain for the Bears and each has a special meaning for Remmy's team. "The Millsaps game this Saturday (1:30 p.m. at Francis Field) is going to be tough. They manhandled us last year (40-3), but I think the outcome will be much different this year at home."

"Our team will close out the home schedule on Nov. 3 against Principia College (7 p.m. at Francis Field) and I anticipate no problems in preparing the team for that contest after the disappointing 14-17 loss to them last year."

WU ends regular season action in Terre Haute, Ind., against Rose-Hulman Institute on Saturday, Nov. 10.

Arvidson serves as advisor to NASA

Raymond E. Arvidson, WU professor of earth and planetary sciences, has been named chairman of four national committees which will advise the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) on the processing, distribution and maintenance of data during the 1990s.

Managing voluminous streams of data — an inevitable consequence of the "space station era" — is considered one of the greatest challenges facing researchers in the space sciences.

"Data generated by the space station and associated platforms will be unprecedented in its volume and complexity," says Arvidson. "While it's clear that this information will help us to answer major scientific questions, the challenge of managing these data is enormous. That's why we must see cooperative ventures among those in industry, academia and government."

The four committees chaired by Arvidson are: the Committee on Data Management and Computation, Space Science Board, National Academy of Sciences; the Earth Observatory System Data Panel, NASA; the Communications and Information Systems Panel, Task Force on Scientific Uses of Space Station, NASA; and the Advisory Panel on Pilot Land Data Systems, NASA (co-chairman).
